

Whanaungatanga Inclusion to bring people together

The Kauri is part of the forest with its own specific role, part of the give and receive cycle. It has a relationship to the broader environment.

We relate this to roles we all have as being part of a community. The Kauri includes all the Ngāhere around it offering support and shelter.

The second layer is to learn who is important in people's lives, who they relate to, who provides for them, who cares about and supports them.

Whanaungatanga is displayed through our connections to people and our relationship with them. This relates to inclusive practices of providing supports and positive relationships through shared experiences and working together, providing people with a sense of belonging.
